

GOLF GOES ARTY

The recently opened Commerce Street Studios offers a creative twist on miniature golf through its Obstacle Art. The miniature golf course was created by 12 local artists. Nine of the holes are featured at Commerce Street Studios, 1551 S. Commerce St., while three other holes will be displayed in various locations in the city. The holes will be rotated to keep the course challenging. Last week several artists decided to test the course. From the top, several golfers study the best way to approach a hole. Jennifer Main concentrates on her putting. And Ann Kellogg faces a colorful and distracting hole. The course will be open during the First Friday events in the Las Vegas Arts District. The cost will be $3 per round to support the project.

CRAIG L. MORAN/REVIEW JOURNAL

The recently opened Commerce Street Studios offers a creative twist on miniature golf through its Obstacle Art. The miniature golf course was created by 12 local artists. Nine of the holes are featured at Commerce Street Studios, 1551 S. Commerce St., while three other holes will be displayed in various locations in the city. The holes will be rotated to keep the course challenging. Last week several artists decided to test the course. From the top, several golfers study the best way to approach a hole. Jennifer Main concentrates on her putting. And Ann Kellogg faces a colorful and distracting hole. The course will be open during the First Friday events in the Las Vegas Arts District. The cost will be $3 per round to support the project.

CRAIG L. MORAN/REVIEW-JOURNAL

